“ One of that too small group of men that rode tall and talked straight. Valued your word, kept his, tied to be a better friend to you than you were to him, It will be hard to eat chilli without thinking of him. My dad had an expression that fit Charles pretty good. He said of a good man you could wear out a lot of pickups looking for a better man for a friend. He is deeply missed and will be long remembered in our hearts.

“ The world needs more people like Charley Thorp. He was a gentle giant in startched jeans, a white shirt and silver belly hat. He was one of those people that you may not see for years but when you did it was like you last saw him yesterday. A true friend and a mentor to those that wanted to earn an honest days wage. I have a lot to be grateful for in this life...calling Charley my friend ranks right-up at the top of the list! We will miss ya a bunch Amigo!
