“ Jay was our son Jeff's closet friend. We knew Jay since they were in elementary school together and later I was able to have him as a student and served as his high school principal. Jay was highly intellegent and attempted many exciting things both in his personal life and in career opportunities. He was thrilled by skiing mountains and kayaking rivers. He also pursued positions as a commercial fight attendent and ski instructor and was liked and respected by people who worked with him and served by him. I know this personally because I observed him in these pursuits and talked to many of his co-workers over the years. Everyone admired Jay. He lived life to the fullest and that may in fact be his greatest legacy. How many of us are truly blessed to know someone who we can say truly lived life with gusto! That was Jay. Everyone who knew Jay is better for it. He modeled a passion for living that we should all pursue. Thank you Jay - you will be missed - but we are so glad you were here to show us how to live, love, learn, and leave a legacy. Close family friends, Roger and Sandy Elford.
